

Abstract of the Disclosure

A system and method for defining and creating web pages comprises a parser that reads a definition file, extracts data from one or more sources, and formats the data using 5 a template file. The parser may create HTML pages that are immediately viewable. A single template file may be used for many different web pages, allowing a web site to have a consistent look and feel while keeping the administration costs to a minimum. The content for each web page may be modified by changing the definition file.